Michael Ferrucci
Integrity in Conservation Award

The Integrity in Conservation Award recognizes an individual or organization working with natural resources who demonstrates adherence to principles and high standards in the face of adversity.

At this point, Mike has mostly retired from his consulting with Interforest and Ferrucci & Walicki, LLC, though he has continued to remain interested, and is actively engaged in forestry and forestry issues in Connecticut, southern New England, and beyond.

Mike was a partner in Interforest, LLC and a co-founder and partner in Ferrucci & Walicki, LLC, which is a land management company that has served private landowners in southern New England for 40 years. Clients include private landowners, land trusts, towns and cities, corporations, private water companies, and non-profit organizations.

He matriculated with a B.S. in Forestry from the University of Maine, at Orono, and then obtained a M.F. degree from the Yale School of Forestry, in 1981. His primary expertise is in the management of watershed forests to provide timber, drinking water, and the protection of other values, in forest inventory and appraisal, hardwood silviculture and marketing, and the ecology and silviculture of New England's natural forests.

The nomination letter highlights Mike's recent leadership in addressing those who wish to curtail active forest management, which is rooted in science, to "Maximize Carbon Storage", a.k.a. "Proforestation." In March 2020, just before COVID hit CT Mike stood up after the Yankee Division business meeting to speak. He said to all, "We have a problem." Next, Mike created and lead a task force that developed a Yankee Division position paper that focused on forest management and carbon. With minor modifications, that position paper became a NESAF position paper. The purpose and importance of the position paper was to educate government officials and the general public on the multiple benefits of forest management. Beyond that, he also led a walk and talk with state legislative leadership and successfully encouraged others to lead walk and talks to spread the message to other legislators in different parts of CT. The task force also developed a trifold brochure for the public, and a Yankee Division website (Forestry in Southern New England (forestersforforests.com). His leadership throughout played a major role in the ability of foresters to continue active and scientific forest management in CT.

Back some 45 years ago, an endorsement letter started, I met Mike as a CT Service Forester responsible for referring landowners to consultants. Red Oak at the time was in high demand. Mike stated that he would charge landowners by the hour, not by a percentage of the harvest value, contrary to typical consultant charges at the time. Mike wanted his clients to understand that there would be no incentive for him to mark trees that would be better off to continue to grow and add value in a future harvest. From the get-go, Mike was committed to putting the forest and the landowner ahead of his own interests. Mike also was a strong advocate in finally convincing a large CT landowner (20,000 acres) to allow deer hunting on the property in order to reduce the over-browsing, it's impacts on other wildlife, the future forest, and watershed protection.

But the most impressive aspect of Mike Ferrucci is the consistency of his work across decades, written in another endorsement. Wherever he decided to apply himself, you knew what to expect from Mike, because he has always been guided by an internal hand. This is "integrity": honesty, strong moral principles, internal consistency, and a strong adherence to such qualities and the ability to uphold them in times of adversity.

Leigh E. Hoar, III
Austin Cary Practicing Professional Award

The Austin Cary Award recognizes New England SAF members who have shown exceptional achievement as practicing forest managers. Austin Cary (1865–1936) graduated from Bowdoin College and introduced northern landowners to forest sampling, growth estimation, and simple silvicultural techniques. Cary's Woodsman's Manual, written in 1909, continued to be used as a textbook until the 1960's.

Leigh "Eric" Hoar, III has worked in both private and public land management positions since his graduation from the University of Maine with a B.S. in Forestry in 1997, where he also won the National Collegiate Game of Logging. Prior to his degree he had military service and then worked as a seasonal Park Ranger, managing visitors and campsites, within the Allagash Wilderness Waterway. Since his degree he worked for the former Champion International as a forester, at the Maine Bureau of Public Lands, and currently with the Lands Program within the Maine Department of Inland Fish and Wildlife (IF&W). In this current position, Eric supervises foresters and interns, who are responsible for the planning and implementing of silvicultural treatments and other innovative approaches to forest management in conjunction with Regional Wildlife Biologists on more than the 100,000 acres of IF&W Wildlife Management Areas. This management includes all aspects of forest inventory, prescription writing, harvest layout, road construction, and both commercial and non-commercial operations associated with the manipulation of forest structure and composition to benefit a variety of large and small game animals.

In the nomination letter, it was noted that, "Eric is endlessly curious about what happened and will happen in the forest and wants to know why these things occur. He is a voracious reader, collecting new and old forestry publications. Eric is constantly learning from his own practice, revisiting old harvest stands to see what worked and what didn't. His commitment to doing the best forestry he can, and to sharing those ideas with others, motivates him to go above and beyond in attention to detail and treatment implementation. He instills this thoughtfulness and work ethic in his crew, cultivating not only trees and wildlife, but new professionals." In addition, the nomination letter included comments and sentiments from 9 other colleagues on Eric's accomplishments as a forest practitioner.

An endorsement letter from a former colleague and who is also a previous winner of this award noted this, "From day one, Eric demonstrated his commitment (and seemingly boundless energy) to doing his best to implement complicated interdisciplinary prescriptions. Eric has an almost insatiable quest for practical knowledge learned in the field as well as new developments presented at workshops and seminars. He has always sought input from fellow foresters and stakeholders. In his current position, he has formed an "informal" silvicultural advisory group to review and critique some particularly difficult treatments to see how he can improve results."

"I first met Eric, when I joined the Maine State Bureau of Public Lands (BPL)," begins the second endorsement. "I was impressed with his knowledge of the land base of BPL in northern Maine, and his grasp of managing for multiple resources. BPL foresters are charged with not only managing the state's lands for exemplary silviculture, but also recreation and wildlife. In many places, recreation and wildlife take center stage, and the silviculture needs to supplement and support those greater goals. Eric and I worked closely together on the GIS needs of BPL, as well as practicing foresters."

To cap his role as a practicing professional, Eric received the 2024 Society of American Foresters District 6 Presidential Field Forester Award.

Carol Redelsheimer
Distinguished Service Award

The Distinguished Service Award is the oldest and highest award given by the New England SAF, recognizing professional achievement in forestry, irrespective of age or tenure, by a New England SAF member.

The nomination letter starts out, "Back in 1983, I was part of a team, at Great Northern Paper, that hired Carol for a summer field position and then hired her in the fall for a full-time GIS position. Since 1983, our respective careers have intertwined, both professionally and within SAF." "Back in 1983, I was impressed with her diligence and attention to detail as she measured CFI plots. Over the ensuing 40 years, I have continued to be impressed with her diligence and attention to detail, along with her willingness to serve SAF at a variety of levels and in a variety of roles."

Carol received her B.S. in Forest Management, Summa Cum Laude, from the University of Maine in 1983. She has worked in private industry (Great Northern Paper Co. and Champion International) for the 1983-1998 period, as a consulting forester for the 1998-2006 timeframe, and for state government, as the Baxter State Park Resource manager (2006-July 2010). Carol then transitioned to become the Director of Science & Education at the Society of American Foresters for the 8/2010 – 12/2021 period. In this position she administered accreditation of professional forestry, urban forestry, natural resource and ecosystem management, and forest technology education programs. She also served as liaison to the Committee on National Convention Programs and the Forest Science & Technology Board (FS&TB), and other duties as assigned. Prior recognitions include Maine Tree Farm/PLT Stewardship Award (1993), MESAF Distinguished Service Award (1994), NESAF Young Forester Leadership Award (1995), SAF Fellow (2008), Univ. of ME School of Forest Resources Distinguished Alumna (2010), NESAF Austin Cary Practicing Professional Award (2011), and NESAF James Toumey Award (2018).

A letter of endorsement commented on their combined efforts with the Committee on Forest Technology School Accreditation (CFTSA), with the endorser serving on the committee and Carol as the SAF Liaison. "Each year, the CFTSA members would receive the self-studies for the Forest Technology programs undergoing accreditation for that year. Carol always had these documents very well organized , making it much easier for us to determine if a program met all the standards, or where it may need some improvement."

"I feel very fortunate to have worked with Carol over the past decade through her role as Director of Science and Education for SAF. This included serving on or contributing to several committees that Carol provided leadership for, including two National SAF Convention Planning committees, A NESAF Annual Meeting Planning Committee, the SAF FS&TB, and the SAF Committee on Accreditation. Serving under Carol's leadership on these committees you quickly learn that not only is she amazingly generous with the time she gives to our profession, but she is incredibly gifted at coordinating groups of diverse interests and backgrounds to deftly produce programming and training standards that serve the science and education needs of the broader SAF membership and the diversity of schools supporting SAF-accredited degree programs, " noted a second endorsement letter.

A comment from the third endorsement, "I consider Carol a friend, professional colleague, and a fellow SAF member. Her accomplishments are outstanding. I cannot think of another individual that puts as much heart and time into SAF and our profession as Carol Redelsheimer."
